GATLIN INTERNATIONAL AND THE GLOBAL DEVELOPMENT LEARNING NETWORK
LAUNCH AFRICA INITIATIVE

Dar Es Salaam, TANZANIA – The Global Development Learning Network, a World Bank initiative, recently partnered with Gatlin International LLC to provide new online career training courses. The courses have been launched in Tanzania and are hosted by the GDLN at <http://www.gdln-tanzania.theelearningcentre.com/>.

The world's largest provider of online workforce development programmes, Gatlin International provides a unique opportunity for GDLN centers to create learning programmes tailored to the needs of individual countries. The Tanzania site features blended learning certificate courses available in a broad range of subject areas including healthcare, business and professional, management and corporate, media and design, IT and software development, skilled trades and industrial, as well as hospitality.

Whether a student is interested in switching career paths, obtaining advanced training and certificates, or a first-time job seeker in need of specialised training, Gatlin International-supported GDLN centers provide the necessary resources for workforce, corporate, vocational rehabilitation or individual career training, all from the convenience of a student's home or office.

“We are proud to be working with the Global Development Learning Network in launching our online certificate courses,” said Gillian Duncan, managing director of Gatlin International. “The Tanzania learning center meets local education needs and also serves other English-speaking GDLN centers across the region.”

Institutions of higher learning or corporations interested in offering quality online career training programmes can contact Gatlin International at info@gatlininternational.com for more information.
